"Carpathian Cultural Route"

ABOUT THE REGION

In the Carpathian region, you can admire not only picturesque mountain landscapes, but also beautiful old buildings created in harmony with nature itself.

The region has a unique cultural and historical heritage. There is a large number of museums, architectural and religious monuments that are not only of architectural but also historical value. In cities, these historic buildings are usually used as concert halls, museums, art galleries and other cultural institutions.

There are dozens of museums whose thematic collections have accumulated unique specimens over the centuries, ranging from prehistoric objects to the present day. They represent the vibrant Carpathian culture, folk crafts, trades, architecture, as well as the extraordinary geography, flora and fauna of the Carpathian region. The museums also cover the tragic pages of the region's history, both during the Second World War and the communist period. This region is multinational, so some exhibitions also present the culture, life, and crafts of other peoples - Hungarians, Jews, Armenians, Poles, Turks, and others.
